AGRA Growing Africa's Agriculture

Young Female Agripreneur
(Rising Star)

Aline Gaju

Managing Director,
Germin8 Rwanda Ltd

RWANDA

About the Business:	Germin8 is introducing hydroponics to Rwandan farmers. The venture uses hydroponics to grow delicious strawberries in a nutrient solution mixed with water. Building a hydroponics system is expensive and complicated, that is why Germin8 locally sources all materials that go into building the system. During the construction process, they invite farmers, local engineers, and youth from RICA University to learn the process. They also document their processes for knowledge sharing with interested farmers. They currently sell their produce to female exporters, with a goal of becoming a hydroponically grown strawberry exporter themselves.
About the Leader:	Aline is a 26-year-old who owns a hydroponic strawberry farm and enjoys exploring innovative agriculture and has dedicated her career to using her voice to ensure that young women see agriculture as an exciting business venture. She advocates for youth inclusion in agriculture.
